What You Need For the Home Party

A display table for the candles and hand outs. It can be something at the front of the room or a large coffee table. Put Candle Drawing Forms here, too.

Have some simple, easy treats cookies or a fruit or veggie tray and something to drink.

Please don't break out the china and glassware. Just use paper plates (if needed), disposable glasses and paper napkins.

The reason for this is you can get party bookings from your guests. If you go all out, your guests may feel that it may take a lot of work or fancy food and impressive serving ware and they could be reluctant to be a host themselves!

48 Hours before the Party

You'll need to find out exactly who is coming! It can be a phone call or send out an email RSVP request. Don't forget to ask if your guests will be bringing a guest and make sure they have driving directions.

At the Party

As people come in, greet them, introduce them to other guests. Have the guests sign the guest book or guest list and have fun chit chatting.

Invite guests to grab a snack and a drink. About 15 minutes after the official start time, get everyone gathered together for the candle presentation.

All you need to do is thank them for coming and introduce yourself, even though they will likely know you. This is where you will say something about the candles yourself, why you started your business, etc.

Once the presentation and any games are done, assist your guests if needed to complete their order forms or beverage refills, etc.

After the Party

Decide how many days you want to keep the party open for outside orders. Make any follow up phone calls needed to get your orders in.
